Dear Majority Leader Thune, Minority Leader Schumer, Speaker Johnson, and Minority Leader Jeffries:

We, the undersigned organizations, write to urge you to address the high and rising health care costs that are threatening the health and financial well-being of our nation's families, workers, employers, small businesses, and communities. Many Americans are increasingly concerned about the cost of everyday necessities like food, housing and especially health care. In 2023, roughly half of families with commercial coverage were spending up to 25% of their monthly budget on health care costs.<sup>i</sup> These high costs have left 100 million families grappling with medical debt they may never pay off.<sup>ii</sup> The 119th Congress has the opportunity and responsibility to provide relief to the American people by advancing a health care agenda that will meaningfully lower health care costs while protecting access to high quality and affordable care. As policymakers weigh options to reduce spending, it is critical that they address the real drivers of unaffordable care without undermining the core commitments of public or private health coverage that the American people rely on.

America's health care affordability and quality crisis stems from a fundamental misalignment between the business interests of the health care sector and the health and financial security of our nation's families. The health care industry sets excessive health care prices and takes advantage of loopholes that drive inefficient health care spending that has little to do with the quality of care they provide. The unchecked growth of big health care corporations and a lack of oversight over their business practices have led to monopolistic health care practices and prices, reduced access to care, worse health outcomes and lower wages for workers — a direct threat to the health and financial security of every American.

Congress has an opportunity to turn the tide on this crisis by advancing bipartisan, commonsense legislation that could address some of our health care system's most obvious failings and take critical steps to ensure everyone in America has access to the high quality and affordable health care they deserve. While some proposals currently in Congress to cut or cap coverage would strip away access to public and private health insurance from our nation's families, and would only serve to further threaten their financial stability, we urge you to consider an agenda to actually address affordability for both taxpayers and consumers. The undersigned organizations urge policymakers to pursue pro-consumer reforms to the health care system that improve transparency, promote healthy competition, and curb industry abuses in order to lower health care costs for everyone. Specifically, Congress should:

- Promote meaningful transparency and accountability, including by:
  - Strengthening hospital and health plan price transparency by requiring all hospitals and health plans to disclose their negotiated rates in dollars and cents.
  - Ending dishonest hospital billing to ensure that big hospital corporations are not overcharging in outpatient settings, saving an estimated $403 million over ten years.<sup>iii</sup>
- Reduce waste and inefficiencies driven by corporate health systems, including by:
  - Enacting a comprehensive same service, same price policy to stop big hospital corporations from charging more for the same care, and shifting patients to higher-cost care settings, saving an estimated $157 billion over ten years.<sup>iv</sup>
- Root out conflicts of interest that increase health care costs, including by:
  - Prohibiting anti-competitive contracting including between providers and insurers that limits patients' access to alternative sources of health care, which is estimated to save $3.2 billion over ten years.<sup>v</sup>
  - Requiring greater transparency around the role of private equity and corporate ownership in health care to ensure all Americans, including those in rural communities, have access to the health care they need at a price they can afford.

If enacted, these policies would set a critical foundation for reining in rising health care industry consolidation and unjustifiably high prices. These reforms would help reduce inflated health care spending and make health care more affordable and value-driven for consumers.

Consumers across the country are feeling the affordability crisis firsthand and are eager for Congress to pass a robust, well-vetted, bipartisan health care package that addresses our health care affordability crisis and reaffirms that their representatives are doing all they can to deliver on their promises to lower costs and improve health care.

We stand ready to support you in this essential and urgently needed work.
